A guide to becoming an adult for young people with disabilities

NHS
What is in this booklet?

What is transition?

Who is involved?

What happens?

Important things to remember

Leaving school
Transition means change.

It starts around 14 and ends at 25.

As you change from being a teenager to an adult, many things in your life will change.

It is what happens when you start thinking about what you want to do when you leave school and what support you may need.

A good transition means that you will be as independent as possible when you are an adult.

This guide tells you what should happen, when and who can support you.
Who may be involved?

Someone who helps you to look after your health

Your parents and family or carers who look after you

You

The most important person

Your school or other people who help you with your special education needs officers

Your social worker, SEN keyworker and other people from children’s services

Your social worker and other people from adult services
What happens?

Your views are really important when planning for your transition. Think about what is important to you.

Think of what you would like to do in the future.

You may meet new people to help you with where you want to live and with work you want to do.
What happens?

When you are 14 your school will arrange a transition review meeting. In this meeting we will talk about your education, health and care plan (EHCP) or your statement of special educational needs (SSEN).

We will talk about things that are important to you. Look again at page 3 for people who might be at this meeting.

Your school will send out letters to all the people who need to come.

You will talk about what you want to do when you leave school, and what support you think you will need to make that happen.
What happens?

After this meeting you will be given a transition plan. The transition plan is about you and:
• the care and support you may need
• your plans and hopes for the future.

Every year you will have a review of your transition plan. If we need to, we can make changes to your plan.

You may be introduced to a social worker from adult social care or disability services, who can complete an assessment to find out if they will be the right service to support you after you turn 18.

You, your family or carers and children’s social worker can continue to have regular contact with adults’ services.
Important things to remember

Remember, you are the most important person in your transition!

When planning for your transition, make sure you understand what is going on.
Ask people to slow down and explain things to you.
Ask people to use signs or symbols that can help you understand.

It is okay to ask questions at the meeting and to make sure that people know what you want. You can ask about ways to find out more information. For example:

• useful phone numbers
• websites
• leaflets of local services

You can ask the people who work with you any questions or about problems to do with your transition.

It’s your meeting!
Leaving school

You will leave school sometime between the ages of 16 and 19.

There will be another review for your transition and you will have the opportunity to look into what you want to do, including work and learning opportunities.

Before you leave school, the people who work with you will talk to you about the support you need if you start another course or training.

Once you are settled into adult life, some of the people who helped you through your transition will change.
Leaving school

You may want to think about work and the help you need to find a job.

You must seek advice about any changes to the way you receive your benefits and find out if you are entitled to other benefits when you turn 16.

You and your family or your carers may choose to open a bank account for you at this time.

You may start using adult health care services.
18 years - becoming an adult

There will be changes to your health and social care once you turn 18.

Your health needs will be transferred from children’s to adults’ services. You should be offered an annual health check from your GP.

You may start to receive support from adult social care.

If not, there may be other services that will support you as an adult. For more information about services search for ‘The Local Offer’ on www.peoplefirstinfo.org.uk
